Governor Hughes vetoed the 2-cent fare bill, and on the fact he opposed the adoption of the income tax amendment. Because of the stand he took on these two questions, some entertain the view he will take a narrow view of the power of the Government to deal with the railroad question, that he may be a strict constructionist as to corporation and trust matters and that he may take the view the Government has no right to levy an income tax.

Not a Reactionary.

On the other hand, Governor Hughes has spoken out flatly against unfair combinations and for the enforcement of the anti-trust act. He has spoken out in support of ample powers for the Interstate Commerce Commission. He favors postal savings banks, wants limited restrictions put about the issue of injunctions, and believes in the con-of injunctions, and believes in the con-servation of natural resorrces.

His friends point to these facts as indicating that he will not be reaction-ary on the bench, but will be one of the liberal and progressive members of the highest court of the country. In the present situation as to legisla-tion, the demand of the public for leg-islation, and as to tests of legislation before the court, with the bench con-stituted as it is, the question of what is the bent of mind of any man appoint-ed to the court is of the utmost mo-ment.

The decision of the cil and tobacco cases in which Justice Hughes will participate will afford a pretty clear indication of what his general attitude as to constitutional construction is.

Mare Careful Search.

The President looked over the field earefully in picking a justice of the Supreme Court. He considered seriously a number of able men. Among those nsidered with care were Louis Marshall, of New York, one of the greatest lawyers in the metropolis; Judge Vande vanter, of the Eighth circuit, and Judge Horace E. Deemer, of the Iowa supreme court. The qualifications of several others were also carefully reviewed.

Mr. Taft has had the appointment of two justices of the Supreme Court already. It is likely he will have the appointment of two, possibly three, others, before his term ends. In case he appoints a chief justice, the opinion is strong heer that Solicitor General Lloyd W. Bowers is slated for the place Governor Hughes is 48 years old. He is a native America, but is said to be of Weish descent. His father

He is a native American, but is said to be of Welsh descent. His father was a native American and a Baptist minister. The family moved to New Jersey when he was young. He went to the Newark public schools and finished there in 1873.

The family then moved to New York where he graduated in the public schools as salutatorian of his class. He graduated with honors from Brown University, attended other educational institutions, and graduated from Columbia Law School in 1884. He was at once admitted to the bar, and he has spent his life since in the practice of law and in the teaching of that profession. He occupied a chair for two years at Cornell.

He first came into nation-wide prominence as special examiner for the Armstrong committee of the New York Legislature in investigating the insurance scandals. This was in 1965. His success in that field made him governor of New York.

Ernest Clancey, twelve years old, of 448 K street northwest, will probably be arraigned in the Juvenile Court on a charge of petit larceny. The boy denies the accusation.

The robbery occurred several days ago, and when Mr. Estler reported it, he told the police he suspected a boy who had been around the stand, and who had disappeared almost simultaneously with the money. Clancey was picked up by Detectives O'Brien and Springman yesterday on a description furnished by Mr. Estler.

None of the money was found in the lad's possession. The detectives say he has been identified by Mr. Estler.

HUGHES SURPRISES

Sacrifices Financial Future to Accept High Judicial Post.

TO SERVE PEOPLE

Believed at Albany That Retirement Won't Affect Legislative Program.

ALBANY, April 26 .- Friends and foes like were surprised today when they learned of Governor Hughes' acceptance of the appointment to the Supreme Bench of the United States,

President Taft is greatly interested in the decision of the great trust cases before the Supreme Court. A good deal has been said that he would not appoint a man who he believed would not uphold the hand of the Governutent in the Oil and Tobacco cases. No more striking contrast between reform program has been presented than that furnished by the news of his

> The governor, as he has told those he who are closest to him, accepted President Taft's appointment because he felt it offered him an opportunity for a lifeime of genuine public service of the greatest importance along the lines followed by him as governor. His alter native was a lifetime of money making in a private law practice. When the question of making money for himself question of making money for himself or serving the people of the entire nation in an important and honorable post was presented, he felt he had no right to refuse that service.

Some of the governor's political antagonists are rejoicing openly because they think they have "got the governor out of the way at last." They consider this appointment virtually to "put him on the shelf." The only regret these men are expressing is that they will be unable to get the governor's remarkable and valuable services on the stump for the Republican State ticket this fall.

But One Faction

But One Faction. These men are only a part of the Republican party, however. From many other Republicans here there came tonight expressions of great regret that that governor would have to leave the service of this State, but of gratification that he was about to undertake so important a service for the nation. It is known by those who are close to question long and carefully before deciding to accept the appointment.

The salary of judge of the Supreme Court is $12,500 a year, though there now is a bill before Congress to make it $17,500, the salary of a justice of the supreme court in the first and accond districts in this State. This, to be sure, is almost beggarly beside the yearly income the governor could make if he took up the practice of law in New York. The money element, though, seems to have been the one least considered by him in reaching his decision. He is a poor man, and acknowledges it freely. He has a large family and children to put through college. His four years as governor have cost him about $12,000 a year over the salary, but that has been due to the fact that aschief executive of the State he has been obliged to maintain a certain degree of state in his establishment, and to travel considerably.

Tastes Distinctly Quiet. the governor that he considered this question long and carefully before de-

Tastes Distinctly Quiet.

On the bench all that would be differ ent. The governor and his family have tastes distinctly quiet. His friends say he will be able to regulate his life in Washington so that his stated income will enable him to live in comfort, in a will enable him to live in comfort, in a modest and retiring fashion, which was characteristic of the man and his family before he was dragged into public life by the gas and insurance investigations. So on every count the governor's friends said he was disposed to accept the honor proffered to him by President Taff. He realized that it meant a life turious expectations are supported by the substitution of the substitution of the substitution expectation. so on every count the governor's friends said he was disposed to accept the honor proffered to him by President Taft. He realized that it meant a lifetime of honorable and important service of the kind most agreeable to him. It meant an assured livelihood adequate for his needs, and with his old age taken care of. The honor had come to him entirely unsought and unexpected, by a combination of circumstances as remarkable as mat which placed him in the governor's chair. It looked to him like the one opportunity of a lifetime to round out his life in comfort, in an honorable place, giving hard, honorable, and important work each day to the people of his country.

Governor Hughes will give up his work here in the second week of October, probably October II. Lieut. Gov. Horace White will succeed him. Political Effect.

There is considerable difference of opinion as to whether the governor's retirement will make any difference in the legislative situation. Those best informed seem to think that it will not. The Republican leaders feel that they are now in a position where they will.

From Goldsmith's store, 1205 F street, and requested that they be shown some diamond rings, and, after deciding on one in particular, left the store with the remark that the husband of one of the women would complete the purchase in the afternoon. They gave a description opposite that of the real thief.

The following day a well-dressed young man called at the store, and requested to be shown some diamonds. A tray was produced, and the man, after looking over the line quite thoroughly, left the store, saying he was going to look further before making a purchase. Later it was discovered that a $350 solitabre ring was missing, and a two-stone ring valued at $50 substitutive in the size of the tag.

With this information the thief was able to make out a duplicate tag, fasten it to the substitute ring, and the clerk seeing all the tags in view and every slot in the tray filled, had no suspicion of the theft.

From Goldsmit

are now in a position where they will have "to go it alone." Responsibility have "to go it alone." Responsibility for all legislative action in this critical campaign year will be on them.

At the same time there is an undercurrent of so-called reaction which is making itself feit. Progressive Republicans say they have little doubt that with Hughes definitely out of the State an effort will be made by some of those Republicans who have fought him most consistently to capture the State convention. If they gained control of that body they would be in a position to nominate their own kind of a ticket.

It may be said, with respect to that, that the governor's friends declare he feels very confident that the work done in the last four years will "stay put." He feels that whatever he has accomplished in the way of changes in political methods and legislative reforms has been accomplished because the people stood behind him in his recommendations. And he has no notion that the people at this time are going to permit ations. And he has no notion that the copie at this time are going to permit any reaction.

Almost everybody here had a good word to say for the governor's appoint-

The appointment of Gevernor Hughes and his acceptance were discussed at the Cabinet meeting today, and there was general expression of the feeling that the outcome was a happy one.

Attorney General Wickersham, on going to the meeting, said:

"I am delighted that Governor Hughes has accepted. I feared he would not take it. It is a happy solution of the situation. He'll make a great judge."

Secretary Knox said:

"I think it is a most admirable appointment. Everybody feels that way about it."

Secretary Nagel said:

"It is a very happy appointment in more ways than one. It is a very fortunate solution of the problem of filling the vacancy on the bench."

President Taft has received numerous messages and letters commending his selection of Governor Hughes.

One interesting circumstance in connection with the appointment is that a justice of the Supreme Court begins to draw his salary from the moment he is commissioned, following his confirmation. This means that if Governor Hughes is commissioned he will be drawing a salary as a Federal official and that under the laws of New York he will not be eligible to hold the office of governor. Will be got around by the Department of Justice holding back his commission until October.
